DO I NEED A BRIDAL TRIAL?

Opting for a bridal trial is entirely your choice, but booking one in advance when you book your bridal package may be cost-effective in the long run. Whilst I recommend having a bridal trial to most clients, they're not for everyone - and that's totally fine!

I'm just here to offer you as much advice as I possibly can. Here are some of the reasons why you may want to book in for a bridal trial:

1. If you're a little bit nervous about getting your make up done on your wedding day, a trial can be really helpful to ease that anxiety and help you plan your look, especially if you're not used to wearing make up.
2. Some people prefer to get a trial prior to booking in for their big day, which is why I offer my bridal trials in addition or separately to your bridal package. I understand it's a huge decision and you may want to try a few Make up Artists before booking in.
3. A bridal trial is just as helpful for me. I get to know you, your face, your style and I take lots of photos and notes, to make sure I'm 100% prepped for your special day. I can then refer back to these on morning of your wedding and ensure we're both happy with the final look.

Booking process

HOW DO I SECURE MY BOOKING?

Get in touch via my website, social media or email, and arrange a no obligation discovery call to get to know me. I'll send over details of pricing and packages.

Once we have discussed all the details of your wedding and you wish to book, i'll draw up a bridal agreement for you to read through, fill in any missing details and sign. This gives us both the reassurance for your big day and commitment to the agreement.

Once the agreement has been returned, and a 30% deposit has been paid, i'll add you to my online booking system and you'll automatically receive a confirmation email and online consultation form to complete.

A trial appointment can be arranged closer to the wedding date, ideally no sooner than 8 weeks prior.

Bookings are not secured until the agreement has been signed and the 30% deposit has been paid.

I'll be in touch closer to the wedding date to firm up all final details and create a personalised timeline for your wedding morning.
